25 of 1961.
18 of 1879.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

The Advocates Act, 1961 (25 of 1961) was enacted to amend and consolidate the law relating to the legal practitioners and to provide for the constitution of Bar Councils and an All-India Bar.

2. Before independence, the Indian High Courts Act, 1861 passed by the British Parliament enabled the Crown to establish High Courts in India by Letters Patent and these Letters Patent authorised and empowered the High Courts to make rules for enrolment of advocates and attorneys. The Legal Practitioners Act, 1879 (18 of 1879) was enacted to consolidate and amend the law relating to legal practitioners in certain Provinces, and to empower the Provincial Government of every other Province to extend thereto such portions of this Act as such Government may think fit. Legal practitioners were governed by the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879, the Bombay Pleaders Act, 1920 (17 of 1920) and the Indian Bar Councils Act, 1926 (38 of 1926).

3. After independence, in line with the need for change in Judicial Administration in India, the Law Commission was assigned the job of preparing a report on the Reforms of Judicial Administration. The All-India Bar Committee also went into detail of the matter and made its recommendations in 1953. A comprehensive the Advocates Act, 1961 was enacted after taking into account the recommendations of the All-India Bar Committee and the Law Commission on the subject of Reforms of Judicial Administration insofar as the recommendations related to the Bar and to legal education.

4. All the aspects which are dealt with in the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879 are already covered under the Advocates Act, 1961 except the matter relating to 'touts'. All sections of the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879, except sections 1, 3 and 36 have been repealed vide clause (a) of sub-section (5) of section 50 of the Advocates Act, 1961. The Law Commission of India in its Report No. 249 titled 'Obsolete Laws: Warranting Immediate Repeal (Second Interim Report)' has also recommended for repealing of the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879 after making suitable amendments to the Advocates Act, 1961.

5. In keeping with the Government's policy of repealing all obsolete laws or pre-independence Acts which have lost their utility, the Government of India in consultation with the Bar Council of India has decided to repeal the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879 and to amend the Advocates Act, 1961 by incorporating the provisions of section 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879 in the Advocates Act, 1961 so as to reduce the number of superfluous enactments in the statute book. This would also help to regulate the legal profession by a single Act, the Advocates Act, 1961.

6. The Bill seeks to achieve the above objectives.

The 21st July, 2023.

FINANCIAL MEMORANDUM

The provisions of the Bill do not involve any expenditure of recurring or non-recurring nature from the Consolidated Fund of India.
